Explanation of interest rates

Having trouble understanding the difference between interest rate, comparison rate and advertised (indicator) rate? Here's an explanation:

Advertised (indicator) rate: This is a rate used as a base for calculating an interest rate being described in our loan contracts as our "advertised" rate

Interest rate: This is used to determine the interest rate charged on individual loan products. The interest rates shown here are our current standard rates. The interest rate is the advertised indicator rate for the home loan plus/les any margins.

Comparison rate: This is a rate which shows as a single figure our current standard interest rate for the loan plus certain standard fees and charges (not all fees and charges are included. This is to help you compare the cost of loans between different lenders.
