

Telling us when a NAB customer has died

NAB

Easy English

Hard words

This book has some hard words.

The first time we write a hard word

- the word is in blue
- we write what the hard word means.

You can get help with this book

You can get someone to help you

- read this book
- know what this book is about
- find more information.

We will write contact information at the end of this book.

About this book

This book is from National Australia Bank Limited or NAB.

This short book is about how we can help if you tell us that a NAB customer dies.

There are 2 ways you can tell us if a NAB customer dies.

1 You can use the Australian Death Notification Service

The Australian Death Notification Service or ADNS can

- contact us for you

- tell us a NAB customer has died.

You must have a death certificate for the person who died before the ADNS can help you.

A death certificate is a document from a doctor that says

- how someone died

- where someone died

- when someone died.

You will need to give the ADNS some information about the person who died.

2 You can contact us directly

You can fill in our online Deceased Customer Notification form.

Deceased means a person has died.

You can find the form on our website.

nab.com.au/common/forms/deceased-customer-notification

Anyone can fill in the form.

When you fill in the form you need to tell us

- about the person who died
- how you knew the person who died
- how we can contact you.

When you fill in the Deceased Customer Notification form you might need certified copies of documents.

Certified copies are documents that are stamped and signed by a certifier.

A certifier is a person with legal rights to say that a document is a true copy of the original.

A certifier can be

- a police officer

- a lawyer

- a chemist.

You might need certified copies of

- a death certificate for the person who died

- the Will of the person who died.

A Will

- is a document made by a person before they die

- says how to manage money and belongings after they die.

Help to manage NAB bank accounts of customers who have died

We need to talk to the legal personal representative if a NAB customer dies.

The legal personal representative makes sure the dead person's money and things go where the person wanted.

The legal personal representative might be

- named in the Will
- the next of kin.

Next of kin is the closest family member of the person who died.

Only the legal personal representative can

- tell us what to do with the money of the person who died

- get account information about the person who died.

Sometimes the legal personal representative is a person with a document from the court.

The document says who can look after the money and things of the person who died

- if there is a Will

- if there is not a Will.

If you are not the legal personal representative you need to tell us who it is.

We will then contact the representative.

What we do when we know a person has died

We will

- stop fees on the accounts of the person who died

- turn off internet banking for the person who died

- cancel credit cards for the person who died.

We will tell the legal personal representative what happens next.

We will ask the legal personal representative for documents we need.
